

Advent 2020

Dear Friend of Trinity House Community,

This year, life as we knew it came to a screeching halt. All of our usual activities vanished. Our bodies, minds and hearts turned to home. And much of 2021 may be the same. What will be our culture's takeaway from this extraordinary experience?

“Perhaps God is raising up Trinity House Community for this moment,” a supporter shared. As families seek to renew their home life, they need access to a vibrant model. And we are here to inspire them with the template for human happiness—the life of God as a loving communion of persons that they were created to reflect.

Thanks to generous supporters like you, the Trinity House Community didn't stop this year. In fact, we reached hundreds of new families: through the café's daily ministry of hospitality, the inspiring Heaven in Your Home Workshops and Letters, and more.

But in partnership with you, we have much work ahead to make this life-changing message more accessible to the many families who so urgently need it! In 2021, your gift will allow us to:

- Film the workshop so anyone can watch it on their own time;
- Film promotional videos for the workshop and café;
- Redesign the popular *Heaven in Your Home Letters (weekly eletters);
- Launch monthly *Heaven in Your Home Gatherings (in-person, livestream, and recorded) to equip and encourage parents;
- Write a signature book with accompanying workbook to spread the Trinity House message for transforming family life.

Will you consider a year-end gift to help deliver more transformative resources to families?

With your support of Trinity House Community, 2021 can be a grace-filled year of spiritual growth for many families at a critical moment.

Thank you for your prayers and partnership in this sacred mission. We are praying for you—who make this mission possible—daily!

Gratefully in Christ,

Soren & Ever Johnson
Founders & Directors

2020 Ministry Impact: What Your Support Makes Possible

“To further their mission of inspiring families to live together with God, the Trinity House Community has forged a new initiative—the Heaven in Your Home Workshop. I endorse this initiative, as it seeks to build a better community by recognizing families as the foundation of society and supporting parents in their role as the primary educators.”

—Most Rev. Michael F. Burbidge,
Bishop of Arlington

Heaven in Your Home Workshops

- 580 men and women from 28 states and 5 countries participated in the 10 workshops we presented in-person or via Zoom. Over 75% of them have stayed engaged with the workshop content. In feedback surveys, participants gave the workshop a 4.8 rating (5: excellent; 4: very good).
- The workshop was featured in Aleteia, National Catholic Register, For Your Marriage, Lisa Hendey & Friends, Called and Caffeinated, Resolutions, Coming Home Network, Theology of Home, and in Soren’s columns in the Arlington Catholic Herald (monthly) and Columbia (June).
- We gave 14 additional parish presentations on Trinity House Community to over 500 men and women.

Heaven in Your Home Letters

- Our weekly eletter has 550 subscribers. This is up 256% from January!
- We are excited about our 45.5% open rate, which is much higher than the 26% average for non-profit eletters.
- We published 48 issues to equip and encourage families in building the 5 levels of their Trinity House.

“I’m a married father of two young and energetic boys. My wife and I long for and are grateful for the friendly, auspicious voice of the weekly Heaven in Your Home Letter popping into my inbox and LinkedIn feed, for the guidance, sense of community, and helpful realization that most young families face similar challenges and opportunities and crave scripturally sound encouragement.”

—Jason Francis

“Trinity House draws us closer to each other, to family and to the Church. It encourages quiet moments of rest, reflection and prayer—an evangelizing presence in a noisy world.”

—Monsignor John Cregan

Trinity House Café

- We celebrated the 6th anniversary of our award-winning café on Oct. 1, 2020.
- Despite an 11-week closure due to Covid-19, the friendliest baristas in Leesburg are on track to serve nearly 20,000 guests this year.
- Generous friends rolled up their sleeves, donating over 500 volunteer hours to improve the café grounds, interior, gift shop, online presence, and more.
- To better serve our guests, we added an outdoor tent, patio heaters, a plexiglass divider, new light fixtures, a new sign, upgraded electrical sockets; we also revamped our menu, expanded our gift shop and hosted 4 art exhibits.
- Participants of bible studies, young adult, and other small groups continued to meet in a socially-distant way, thanks to our spacious side patio.
- The café’s “apostolate of books,” with 2,000 titles donated and sold in 2020—from Aquinas to C.S. Lewis and Tolkien—continued to bless many guests.
- In November, Doris Simon of Deutschlandradio Kultur (the “NPR of Germany”) featured the café in an extensive story, prompting one German listener to write, “Thank you so much for your work and your mission to create a place where everyone can find friendship, hope, confidence, humanity and faith in the future.”

BECOME A LIVING TRINITY HOUSE

The Domestic Church and a “Trinity House”

“Domestic church”: we have heard the phrase for a long while now. And that is a beautiful phrase, because actually it speaks about the reality of the Christian family: the smallest visible expression of the Church. There is an awful lot of meaning packed into these two words: “domestic church.” It tells us first of all what the Church is. For that, we need to step back a moment and go even further—into one of the most basic of our Christian mysteries of faith: the Holy Trinity. We profess there is one God, and yet within the one God, there is a community of persons—Father, Son and Holy Spirit—each of whom is united with the other two by a unique bond of love. And so, the Holy Trinity is a community of love, and it is the model for our human community. Therefore, the Church finds its deepest expression in this kind of community of love, for as the Father, Son and Holy Spirit are united in these bonds of love, so the members of the Church, with Christ the Head, are likewise bonded through love—the love of the Trinity, uniting us through Christ, in the power of the Holy Spirit, to give praise to the Father.

A Living Family that Models the Trinity: Welcoming, Listening, Serving

We can say then that the “domestic church” is one that finds its deepest model in the Trinity. Here at Trinity House, the family is often called the “Trinity House,” not meaning the physical place here, but a living Trinity House, a living family that models the Trinity. This is a wonderful expression, and Soren and Ever have enabled us to understand that, as a living Trinity House, the family is marked by the aspects of welcoming, listening and servicing.

As a living Trinity House, the family is marked by the aspects of welcoming, listening and servicing.

God the Father is welcoming us to the table, His table, the table of His Word and of the Eucharist. God the Holy Spirit is listening to our pleas, our prayers, the groans of our hearts; not only listening, but also advocating for us before the Father, in union with Jesus, who is also another intercessor. God the Son is serving us—first of all, by His dying and rising, the paschal mystery, that makes possible our salvation. He also serves us by giving us all the sacraments, but especially

On the vigil of Christ the King Sunday, Nov. 21, 2020, Bishop Emeritus Paul Loverde came to Trinity House Café and shared this Advent meditation via livestream with friends of Trinity House Community. His inspiring and encouraging reflection offers concrete suggestions for making a “new beginning” this Advent!

the sacrament of the Eucharist, where we are fed with Jesus Himself, His real presence under signs of food and drink, to strengthen us as we witness.

If the family looks at God as God the Father welcoming, and God the Holy Spirit listening to us, and God the Son serving us, then, in turn, if we are modeled after the Trinity, we must reach out in welcome, in the ability to listen attentively, and in serving. Welcoming, listening and serving—first of all, within the family, but then, as family, beyond.

Imagine what that means within the family if, with the help of God—of course, not solely on our own ability, but that ability transformed by God’s grace—we can learn to welcome each other! To welcome each other in terms of our being understanding and patient; welcoming each other in terms of accepting our weaknesses, our quirks; and in turn, as family, listening to each other—listening with the heart. That makes a difference. You listen with the heart. What is that person really saying? Sometimes we use words, and they are not really what we are saying. We are saying something different. We have to listen carefully with the heart. We then, as family, serve one another, helping one another, in the ways I have explained; and then, beyond the family, reaching out to others, again, with that spirit of welcoming, listening and serving.

The Family: The Soil of Vocations and of the Sacrament of Matrimony

Moreover, as the domestic church, we realize that it is the family that is the soil of future vocations: a future calling to sons within that family to be priests, if God so wills that; or both the sons and daughters to be religious brothers and sisters, if God so wills that; and later on, when some of those sons marry and grow up, perhaps they'll be invited to become permanent deacons. But the family is not only the seed of those vocations; in a certain sense, it is the seed of another vocation—of another sacrament called matrimony. Marriage preparation begins in the family, not later on when you go to school. In the family! That is where we learn how to be with each other in friendliness, support, growing in all the virtues needed to have a worthwhile relationship of husband, wife, father, mother, children. Yes, see how important the family is! Yet the family today is in great trouble. There are so many things in the culture that weaken and devalue the family, so we must work to strengthen our families and to strengthen people to enter into solid families in the future.

This Advent: New Beginnings, New Inroads to Becoming a Living Trinity House

Advent is a season of hope, because Advent reminds us that what we long for and hope for: in one sense, it is already come; and that is the person of Jesus Christ. But in Advent, we actually recall three comings of the Lord Jesus. We look back and remember His historical coming, when He was born into our human family, with His human nature, on Christmas day. That's the first coming. We also recall that at the end of life, and again at the end of the world, there will be another coming of Christ. When our life ends, He comes to greet us, and hopefully, if we've tried to be faithful, to lead us to eternal life. At the end of the world, we shall all be judged, and please God, again through His divine mercy, all be admitted to eternal life, forever and ever. But in between the first coming and the final coming, there is a third coming: every day. The Lord comes every day in many ways to us. He comes to us when we pray. He comes to us when we receive the sacraments. He comes to us in creation. He comes to us in one another in the family, in the parish.

Yes, there is time in Advent for the family to reap new beginnings, make new inroads... living in joyful hope for the gift of Jesus Christ, our Savior.

This season of hope, Advent, reminds us of these three comings. I would suggest that as we look forward to this new season, that as family, we would seek to more concretely make this a season of hope, of expectation—not so much of gifts, although gifts are fine. You see, the real gifts are not material gifts. The real gifts we have are the gifts that are immaterial: our love, our presence with one another. We can make that more real as we also remember the gift God gave us in His Son. So how about getting an Advent wreath, or taking the wreath you have from the attic, and getting some new candles, and using it for all four weeks of Advent? As you light the candle, offer a prayer, not rushed, but with some time. And take some time, maybe around the table, to discuss what the meaning of this Advent wreath is.

Or perhaps we take some time—I know we can be very busy, we can be distracted—each week, 10 or 15 minutes, to use the readings for the following Sunday. As we look at the three readings, we would see in the Old Testament reading how God is preparing for the coming of the Redeemer. God is preparing so that we may be welcomed by Jesus into salvation, into the sacraments, especially the Eucharist. We would see also in the readings how the Holy Spirit is listening now to our prayers as He draws us closer to Jesus, whose birth we shall liturgically recall at Christmas, and as He comes every day to us. And we can also see in these readings during Advent how the Son serves us. We do not hear a lot about the dying and rising of Jesus in Advent as such, but Jesus came precisely to save us. And so, Christmas leads us to the dying on the cross and rising to new life. In Christmas, we see the infant welcoming us to His love that He will make even more graphic by dying and rising—and will make available to us in every Eucharist.

Yes, there is time in Advent, for the family to reap new beginnings, make new inroads, so that the family can become what it is called to be—this domestic church. It can become an expression even more of the presence of the Trinity. The family can become a living Trinity House: welcoming, listening, serving; being grateful for the gifts given, and living in joyful hope for the gifts God will give us, especially the gift of one another in the family, and the gift of Jesus Christ, our Savior. In closing, I wish each of you a blessed, happy hope-filled Advent—Advent that rejoices your heart with true hope, enduring hope, because the hope is a person, whose name is Jesus. Thank you and God bless you!
